Kort projektbeskrivelse som forelægges udvalget uredigeret
Free Music for Kids in Copenhagen Libraries Following the success of our summer events in playgrounds, Free Music for Kids is coming to five libraries in Copenhagen during the winter months. Four improvisational musicians will visit these libraries with instruments, offering children and families the chance to participate in free improvisation concerts. This project aims to transform libraries into spaces for creative and collaborative musical interaction. Musicians will move through the library, inviting participants to listen, interact, and create soundscapes together in a spontaneous, barrier-free environment. Each session will last an hour and feature sound games that stimulate movement, voice use, and rhythm. This program promotes social interaction, creativity, and well-being through musical expression, with audio and video documentation contributing to research on music education. Events will take place at least twice per location to foster continuity. Free Music for Kids is led by a diverse group of musicians and educators from Copenhagen's Rhythmic Conservatory, aiming to share the social and creative power of improvisational music with children and families across the city.

Formidling af projektet

We will promote the project on our website, our social media channels, and those of the host libraries. We will print flyers with the full event schedule to encourage widespread participation across the city. We will also share the events on our personal social media channels. We will share the flyer in parent groups across the city and neighborhoods.
