Meramieh - 3 performances in Copenhagen 15th-17th March 2025

We are applying for support to show Al-Harah Theatres play “Meramieh” at the UNION in Copenhagen. The play has been shown with great success and full houses at UNION in 2022.

The full project will consist of a tour of Al-Harah’s play “Meramieh” in 5 Danish cities combined with talks and workshops.

In 2017, Al-Rowat for Studies & Research (RSR) published the book “Living Memories” – in partnership with The Danish House in Palestine. The project aims to preserve Palestinian memory by gathering oral interviews from Palestinian men and women narrators with tenacious memories who were displaced in 1948 to elsewhere in Palestine (the West Bank, Gaza, or the 1948 areas) and the Diaspora (Jordan, Lebanon, Egypt and Chile). The stories cover events in a number of Palestinian villages, towns and refugee camps. To date RSR has collected 114 oral accounts (with 61 women and 53 men) in audio and video files.

“Meramieh” was created as a piece of Verbatim Theater (a form of Documentary Theater) aspiring to contribute to the enrichment of the Palestinian narrative. It is rooted in the belief that when Palestinians narrate their own stories, they take part in the writing and reclaiming their own history. The play is based on the six testimonies published in the book “Living Memories” which features the 6 different narrators. The director of the play Mirna Sakhleh edited the text of “Meramieh” through combining and integrating these testimonies.

Voices, dialogue, and exchange with target groups:

We believe it is highly necessary to give voices to the Palestinian narratives, in the Danish society. Bringing the team from Palestine to Denmark will give the opportunity to exchange artistic work of theatre with Danish artists and audiences. We have experienced from previous tours that “Meramieh” brings new ways of talking between generations of Palestinians and other audiences.

It’s also a way to bring new artistic voices to Denmark to tell the oral history and present Palestinian narratives. It’s a valuable opportunity for the Palestinian team to learn more about Danish culture and people, and a chance to develop partnerships with Danish theatres and in the future bring them to Palestine.

The team will have meetings with Danish artists and students (Aarhus Tech gymnasium, Aarhus University and The University of Copenhagen) to exchange experiences about working in theatre in Palestine and Denmark. After every performance we will have interaction with the audiences about the play and how the project was developed. The dialogues will also discuss possible similarities and differences between artists in Palestine and in Denmark.

By showcasing the rich tapestry of Palestinian stories, traditions, and contemporary challenges, the tour of “Meramieh” aligns with the mission of removing barriers between cultures and promoting a sense of global inclusiveness and shared humanity. Through this artistic endeavor, we aim to contribute to an inclusive world that respects and celebrates diversity and freedom of speech.

Communication and outreach:

The Danish House in Palestine has a broad and solid network of Danish-Palestinians all over Denmark. We will engage groups and organisations to take part in the dissemination of the performance. We have the full support from Det Palæstinensiske Kulturinstitut.

Producer Sofie Mønster is hired to handle the tour in Denmark.

The performance will be played in Arabic with subtitles in Danish and/or English.

Mission

AL-HARAH aims to bring compelling stories, in one of the most uncensored spaces, to audiences throughout Palestine, the Arab World and beyond, through producing and distributing theater performances on high artistic levels, and our educational training programs which create new theatre practitioners who believe that theatre has a strong potential to implement positive change.

Vision

AL-HARAH Theatre is committed to principles of plurality and multiculturalism. Through producing and promoting theater arts in Palestine, we are partaking in building and maintaining a civil society that emphasizes human rights, democracy and freedom of expression as key components for a dynamic society.

Scope of work

- Producing theater for children, young people and adults.
- Touring in Palestine, the region and internationally.
- Advocating for the rights of children, women, people with disability and marginalized groups.
- Drama and theater training of children and young people.
- Implementing Cultural projects and initiatives in partnership with local and international organizations.
- Exchange projects for young people internationally.
- Capacity building and advanced training for young people in the field of performing arts.
- Organizing the Palestine International Theater Festival for Children and Youth, the Yalla Yalla Street Festival, and other festivals.

Overview of Al-Harah's work

Al-Harah Theater, a Non-Profit Cultural Organization situated in Beit-Jala, Palestine, is dedicated to cultivating and sustaining a civil society grounded in principles of human rights, democracy, and freedom of expression. Our mission revolves around direct engagement with children, youth, and older age groups, achieved through a diverse array of activities such as performances, festivals, training programs, and cultural projects.

By actively involving the local community in Palestine, including marginalized areas, and forging partnerships on an international scale, Al-Harah Theater endeavours to enrich both its own work and the broader performing arts sector in Palestine.

Central to our ethos is the conviction in theatre's capacity as a potent tool for spotlighting social issues and effecting positive change. Amidst the formidable political, social, and economic landscape, we prioritize the rights of children, people with disabilities, youth, and women, consistently integrating these values into our core mission and activities.

Since its establishment in 2005, Al-Harah Theater produced 45 theater performances for children, reaching out to an estimated number of 500000 people out of which are 350,000 children in the West Bank areas in cities, villages, refugee camps, marginalized and faraway areas. Through Al-Harah Theater Street Carnival "Yalla Yalla" and the three editions of "Palestine International Theater Festival for Children and Youth", 70% of the audiences targeted were children.

Al-Harah Theater is a member in the Palestinian Network for Children's Rights joining the Palestinian efforts to achieve child protection, enhancing children's rights; in a safe environment, advocating for their rights, activating these rights, raising awareness of the community towards their rights, and enforcing laws that guarantee that.

Al-Harah Theater contributes to the empowerment of the performing arts sector through the provision of vocational and advanced training in fields related to performing arts including sound, light, scenography and costumes, stage management, and production management through its Performing Arts Training Center (PARC) where two groups of young people graduated finding their opportunities in the work field. It continues to provide advanced workshops in theater related specialties such as different kinds of directing and others. Further, Al-Harah works with a wide pool of young actors and actresses from all over Palestine who take part in the different theater productions and drama training done by Al-Harah Theater. Drama is considered an important tool providing a free space towards self-expression and building a strong independent personality of the young people.

Furthermore, Al-Harah Theater had several productions that address major dilemma's that face women in the Palestinian context and in general, one is "Shakespeare Sisters" that handles the issue of single, widowed, or divorced women and society's perspective and influence on their life. The other play is "Womb", discussing the social and physical pressures that women who cannot have children bare from their community. A third play "T'eesh- To Live" is on the issue of honor killing in the community. Al-Harah also had several productions addressing issues related to young people in cooperation with local NGOs targeting marginalized communities.

Al-Harah Theater leads many advocacy efforts and initiatives advocating for the rights of children, women, young people, and people with disability. That is being done through performances, workshops, web-series, online and T.V spots, and social media campaigns.

In the last 18 years, Al-Harah Theater has received funding from International NGOs (SIDA, EU, Anna Lindh Foundation, British Council, IM, Danish House, Goethe Institute, Finnish Church Aid) and regional NGOs (AFAC, Al-MAWRED) implementing successful cultural projects locally, regionally, and internationally. That, in addition to working in partnership with regional and international theatre organizations to create theatre productions that toured Arab and European countries.

Al-Harah acquires an efficient project management system and an experienced team in project management and implementation. Clear managerial and financial accredited procedures are in place in addition to a well-established Monitoring and Evaluation System. The organization sits for an annual financial audit, and to additional project audits when needed. An Audited Financial Report and an Annual report are published annually by Al Harah. Al-Harah also has Anti-Corruption, Anti-Harassment and Gender Equality policies in place.
